• Mobile Development in React Native

I started as a Front-End developer and after some time, given that I knew Java, they offered me to learn, by my own means, Flink, a very interesting Apache Framework. Since then I've been developing a real-time application to analyze data (besides the Front-End development). They've also asked if I wanted to learn Spring Boot, which I happily did. With Spring Boot I've made secured websockets (with Spring Security) and secured APIs. We are currently developing an API Gateway for the different microservices of our backend.
